Report on Benefits of the Engineering in the Industry and its Growth

In this session we introduce to the students about the important of engineering and benefits of the engineering in the industry and its growth.

Topics covered

What is engineering?

Engineering is the application of mathematic and scientific principles to solve problems. Engineers research, invent and refine processes across a wide range of fields including medicine, transport, electronics, and much more. Most of what you see around you was designed by an engineer somewhere.

Why study engineering?

Engineering is a fascinating and ever-evolving subject. There are many specialities to choose from according to your interests, as well as a huge range of jobs available. As an engineer, you can make your mark on the world in a positive and enduring way.

1. Employability

During an engineering degree, you practice all the skills that will be vital both in the workplace and in everyday life. The logical thinking, objectivity and decision-making you will develop are key in engineering jobs, as well as being transferrable skills for other careers. Engineers make great managers and, as a result, engineering is the most common undergraduate degree among Fortune 500 CEOs. Some of the most famous of these include Tim Cook (Apple), Satya Nadella (Microsoft) and Mary Barra (General Motors).

2. High salary potential

Engineering is a stable and well-paid profession. 9 of the top 10 highest paid degree subjects are engineering-related and in 2017, graduates with an engineering degree achieved an average gross annual wage of £45,000 — nearly double that of graduates of English, linguistics, languages and media.* With specialist training and a few years' experience, salaries can be even higher.

3. International opportunities

Engineers are needed in every country in the world. They design and implement solutions to everyday problems such as access to water and electricity, safe transport and medicine — things that are needed everywhere. This means you will have opportunities to travel and work in other countries, enjoying all the experiences that come with it.

4. Improve the world

As an engineer, you will contribute to society in a unique way, be helping to invent and develop infrastructure that improves people's lives. From medical engineering to civil engineering, what you do at work will make an impact that you can be proud of. For example, engineers are heavily involved in designing and implementing renewable technologies that benefit the planet and they have recently played a vital role in fighting the COVID-19 pandemic, inventing lab-free 'PCR' testing and manufacturing vaccines.

5. Think creatively

Engineering is an exciting subject because it combines scientific and mathematical knowledge with creative thinking. It teaches you to question the established ways of doing things and to come up with new ideas. In order to do this, you need creativity and an ability to look beyond what has been done before.

The Importance of Soft Skills syllabus

Soft skills refer to both character traits and interpersonal skills that will influence how well a person can work or interact with others. The term soft skills covers a wide range of skills as diverse as teamwork, time management, empathy and delegation.

The World Economic Forum Future of Jobs report suggested that by 2025, complex problem-solving, critical thinking, creativity, people management and emotional intelligence would be among the most important skills required in the workplace.

The importance of these soft skills is often undervalued, and there is far less training provided for them than hard skills such as coding. Organizations seem to expect people know how to behave on the job and the importance of skills such as taking initiative, communicating effectively and listening, which often is not the case.

What are soft skills?

Soft skills are personal attributes that influence how well you can work or interact with others. These skills make it easier to form relationships with people, create trust and dependability, and lead teams.

In essence, they are essential for your success in the workplace, your company's success and your personal life.

Why are soft skills important?

Most interactions with other people require some level of soft skills. At a company you might be negotiating to win a new contract, presenting your new idea to colleagues, networking for a new job, and so on. We use soft skills everyday at work and developing these soft skills will help you win more business and accelerate your career progression.

On the other hand, a lack of soft skills can limit your potential, or even be the downfall of your business. By developing strong leadership, delegation, teamwork, and communication abilities, you can run projects more smoothly, deliver results that please everyone, and even positively influence your personal life by improving how you interact with others.

Outside of the office, soft skills such as communication are used to build friendship groups and meet potential partners. You might be negotiating the price of your new house renovation, or mentoring your neighbours children on the weekend. Soft skills are useful both in our professional and personal lives.

Let's have a look at some specific examples supporting the importance of soft skills.

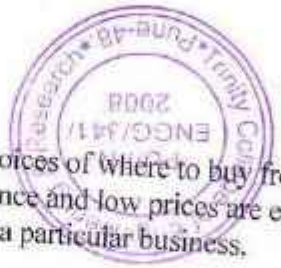
1. Career progression and promotion

iCIMS Hiring Insights (2017) found that "Ninety-four percent of recruiting professionals believe an employee with stronger soft skills has a better chance of being promoted to a leadership position than an employee with more years of experience but weaker soft skills."

It's become vital to develop these skills if you want to progress in your career as they will set you apart from others at the interview and on the job.

2. The modern workplace is interpersonal

Skills such as active listening, collaboration, presenting ideas and communicating with colleagues are all highly valued in the modern workplace. Strong soft skills ensure a productive, collaborative and healthy work environment, all crucial attributes for organisations in an increasingly competitive world.



3. Customers and clients demand soft skills

Consumers these days have a huge number of choices of where to buy from, bought about by the internet and smartphones. For these consumers, convenience and low prices are easy to come by, so customer service is often what influences the choice to use a particular business.

The ability to communicate at a human level with customers is therefore a vital factor in an organisation's success.

4. The future workplace will rely on soft skills

Automation and artificial intelligence will result in a greater proportion of jobs relying on soft skills. Advances in technology have caused tasks that require hard skills to decline, making soft skills a key differentiator in the workplace. A study by Deloitte Access Economics predicts that "Soft skill-intensive occupations will account for two-thirds of all jobs by 2030".

As the cost of robots decreases and the performance of artificial intelligence improves, jobs such as manufacturing line workers, will become automated. Traditional skills like teamwork, communication and critical thinking will be more important than ever.

5. Soft skills are hard to automate

Following on from the previous point, soft skills such as emotional intelligence are hard to automate and unlikely to become automated anytime soon. This means they're expected to become more desirable in the near future.

However soft skills can be difficult to teach and track improvements on. Companies such as VirtualSpeech are tackling this by using VR as a way to improve soft skills.

6. Soft skills are in high demand by recruiters

Soft skills are in high demand in the workforce. According to the 2017 paper by a Harvard student on the importance of social skills in the labour market, jobs requiring high levels of social interaction grew by nearly 12 percent as a share of the U.S. labour force

Most in-demand soft skills (from LinkedIn research):

- Communication
- Organisation
- Teamwork
- Critical thinking
- Social skills
- Creativity
- Interpersonal communication
- Adaptability

In the papers conclusion, it reasons that because computers are very poor at simulating human interaction, social skills are still important. Therefore, individuals should still look to improve their social and soft skills through activities such as volunteering, leading a team or even by working on an open source project with other people.

EMPOWERMENT OF THE STUDENTS

As the world progresses, India is also developing on an international level at a fast pace. Over the years, our country has developed and evolved as a knowledge-based economy because of the abundance of our human resource which is young, flexible and capable. It is the need of the hour that the youth of the nation is competently developed in certain skills required in the professional and personal world as well. Fluent English, good communication and interview presentations are 3 skills which are of utmost value in the current market. Developing the same in college students will proved a much-needed boost in their academic and work performance.

First Year: English Skills

Individuals should be fluent not only in their mother tongue but also in English which is the language of the world. Being skilled in English provides a sense of confidence to individuals while progressing in the professional fields. The students in the first year of college are budding individuals who need proper guidance and training in this skill as it is put to use very frequently throughout life. Learning any new language is no easy feat. It requires the development of various aspects and should consider a holistic approach which will actually prove beneficial in the real world.

Aspects Manolaya has included in the course syllabus of English are as follows-

- Grammar:

The foundation of any language is its grammar. It is the structure that conveys precise meaning from the writer to the audience. Grammar is one of the most important elements of language study, yet unfortunately, it can also be one of the most complex and difficult aspects. Correct grammar is the key to speaking English fluently and confidently which is a critical skill in a professional context. It'll help you write more compelling job applications, proposals, articles and books. On the other hand, basic grammatical errors can demonstrate sloppiness and a lack of attention to detail. It can also put clients and employers off from working with you. Having good grammar helps you come across as more intelligent, educated, and professional. It becomes necessary that individuals learn and understand the grammatical concepts clearly and without any errors on the facilitator's part.

➢ Language skills:

The basic language skills include listening, speaking, reading and writing. Learning the grammar of any language is of no use until you have a good vocabulary of the same. The four skills are the pillars of developing an effective vocabulary and enable an individual to grasp, follow, know and understand the language. Not only are they helpful in a professional setting but also in making friends, building relationships and being confident about who you are. These communication skills are essential in all stages of life to help us be better individuals. Whether you're a fresh graduate looking for your first job or a seasoned professional who wants to switch careers, language skills will help you transition smoothly.

- Listening: It is the primary learning skill and one of the best ways to develop vocabulary. It is well-known that a baby learns to speak by listening to the vocabulary used in its surroundings. Similarly, as an individual hears enriched English, his/her vocabulary will automatically develop. Along with this, listening is an important part of the communication process. Without this ability, an individual will fail to comprehend and translate the significance of what is being communicated.

- Speaking: This ability is like the other side of the coin, the first being to listen. It means to communicate or express one's thoughts and feelings in a spoken language. Speaking is the communication medium of learning orally. As the famous proverb 'Practice makes man perfect' says, it is essential to practice our vocabulary by keeping it in use through communication. Mastering phonetics, the sounds, the rhythm, and to an extent the intonation, modulation and variation is also an important aspect of speech. These abilities help individuals to be more effective in conveying ideas and information.

- Reading: The more you read, the more you learn. Reading, even at a slow pace exposes students to more sentences, grammar, and new vocabulary than the average class or TV show. This is why students who read consistently read English books are able to speak more fluently than students who don't, despite having done the same number of classes. Additionally, you are introduced to multiple perspectives, different cultures and new ideas. Reading also helps individuals to understand new concepts and learn how to effectively presenting their ideas.

PU/PN ENGG/341/ 2008

- Writing: As is the case with speaking, writing is also a dynamic expertise as it expects us to utilize our hands and our minds to deliver the composed message, idea, thought or information that we would have spoken otherwise. The ability to sequence their ideas and thought processes ought to be developed in students so as to acquire cohesiveness, completeness and accurateness in their writing. All this comes in handy while writing resumes, proposals, reports and many more such documents required in professional settings.

Second Year: Communication Skills

Being able to communicate effectively is perhaps the most important of all life skills. It is what enables us to pass information to other people, and to understand what is said to us. Developing your communication skills can help all aspects of your life, from your professional life to social gatherings and everything in between.

Communication is a two-way process- it involves both the sending and receiving of the information, and thus requires a shared understanding. If conveying anything, it needs to be clear and precise. The speaker must ensure that the listener understands whatever is being conveyed. As a recipient, one must listen carefully to the information and ask questions to check whether both have the same understanding of the situation. Communication is therefore an active process in both directions.

Having the knowledge of a language isn't sufficient to excel in communicating. It requires a wide range of skills like empathy, nonverbal communication, listening, confidence, openness, friendliness, clarity, respect and so on. Imbibing them in the torch-bearers of tomorrow is not only important but also essential.

The syllabus included in the communication skills course is as follows:

Third Year: Interview Preparation

The most important step in acquiring a job is the interview. It has also become absolutely essential in today's job market. As it is face-to-face and an individual gets only one attempt, there is a lot of stress and pressure to perform well. While some are naturally confident, others tend to feel incredibly nervous and jittery. It doesn't help that many applicants aren't aware of the interview process or the knowledge of how to get an edge over the others. There are quite a few ways to prepare for interviews beforehand in a smart and efficient way. These techniques help overcome the fear of facing something unexpected and new. They help the individuals to feel cool, calm, and confident as well as more in control.

Topics which will be covered in the course of interview preparation are as follows:

Sr. No.	Topic	Objectives
1.	How to face the interview	• Building a positive approach towards interviews. • Inculcating skills to help in facing interviews confidently.
2.	How to study company profile	• Learn about the company's values, missions. • Get a general idea about the company's strength and position in the market. • Get an idea about what to expect in the interview.
3.	Dressing sense / outfit	• Teaching the importance of physical appearance and impressions. • Educating them about how their actions and appearance affect others' perception of them. • Teaching the importance of a positive appearance.
4.	How to prepare for various types of questions	• Helping students to know what type of questions are asked in interview. • Making them aware how to answer the questions smartly. • Educating them in how to use strengths while answering the questions.
5.	How to design the resume	• Making them understand the value of the resume. • Creating a resume while keeping in mind the company's profile and the applied position. • Fetching learning attitude in resume.

6.	Body language	• Developing positive body language. • Making them understand how to use body language in a professional set up or during interviews. • Developing self-confidence.
7.	People Networking	• Making students understand how networking can increase confidence. • Developing a positive influence through meeting different people. • Developing awareness about what are the ways to develop contacts, how to maintain them and learning more about how these contacts can develop opportunities for them.
8.	Communication skill for interview	• Detailed knowledge about conversing with the interviewers. • Non-verbal cues and what they communicate. • Importance of honesty.
9.	Mock Interviews	• Getting a first-hand experience about what to expect. • Practicing and revising everything learnt. • The student will personally understand where practice is required and which strategies to implement.

Talent Supply – Challenges in IT

- Employability of Graduates – Though India has plenty of students graduating each year, not all of them have the desired competencies which are required by world class organizations. Also the best of the engineering talent have options to work in other industries like Financial services, Manufacturing etc or pursue higher studies.

- Average Tenure – The average tenure of engineers in a company is around 2-3 years. Such short tenures of employees are further accentuated by the fact that companies are willing to offer 30-40% salary hikes over their existing salary.

- Shortage of Management talent – There is a dearth of management talent in the Indian market. There has been a huge salary inflation for jobs in these levels.

- Hiring by Financial Back-offices – Over the last couple of years more than 20 financial services companies have set up captive IT operations in India. They have aggressively ramped up in the areas of Application Development and Infrastructure Support.

Department of Computer Engineering
Group Discussion Report
Mentoring Program
Training and placement Coordinator: Prof. Pankaj Vishwas Phadtare
Student coordinators: Mr. Aditya Chavan BE Computer
Faizan Kalkoti TE Computer
Shon Gaikwad SE Computer

Group Discussion was conducted on the topic "Emerging trends in Information Technology".

At the beginning of the session everybody seemed hesitant in expressing their opinion but soon the discussion picked up the pace and the purpose of the discussion, which was to encourage students to speak up and boost their confidence, was fulfilled. The discussion was between three groups, First group chose to highlight the positive impact of day to day life problems and their engineering solutions using engineering solutions based on emerging trends like Artificial Intelligence, cloud computing and data science. Second group comprised of students who perceived negative impact of emerging trends and the third group was the neutral group that apprised about both the benefits and challenges with their engineering solutions using emerging trends.

Points discussed in the favour of the topic were like "different day to day life problems like traffic, electricity, and giving their Engineering solutions using emerging trends in IT like AI, IOT, Block chain, data Science and Cloud Computing ". The views against the motion were "leads to false trap, self obsession and materialism, means of spreading fake news, promotes gossips, trolling and addiction". Lastly, we tried to draw attention of the students to summarise and conclude the GD highlighting all the important points' discussed by all the groups.

Hi Monika,

As there are more than 60 candidates who have cleared the test, it will be difficult to run the test for all of them. So can you please shortlist 30 good students and ask them to attend the drive tomorrow?

There are a few whom we feel who are technically strong and we would like them to be a part of the drive. Sharing their names below:
Amit Dhadhankar
Pravin Chavan
Ashutosh Khatarkar
Mehboob Khan
Vaishali Chavan

We will be in the premise at 10am tomorrow.
